

Principle of conservatory design

A conservatory with windows through to the main house can act as a habitable solar collector with heat being stored in the floor and wall. Movement of warmed air can be controlled by the windows or a combination of windows and vents. Don't design a fully glazed roof on a north- or west-facing conservatory – the room is likely to overheat in summer.