

Typical heat losses from an uninsulated house

In a typical uninsulated timber-framed house, 30–35% of heat is lost through the roof, 21–31% through the windows and 18–25% through the walls. The floor and “air leakage” account for the remaining heat loss.

© BRANZ 2007

