

Schematic of an on-site domestic greywater treatment system used in combination with a waterless composting toilet

This design option eliminates the need for a blackwater system but must incorporate a means of dealing with urine. Greywater can be disposed of in a land application or used for irrigation. Designers must inform owners of the need to be selective in the use of chemicals as many are harmful to garden plants.

© BRANZ 2007