

Principle of air gap used for backflow prevention

Designing an air gap into the system is the most cost-effective and reliable way to avoid potential backflow contamination of mains supply water by the collected rainwater.

© BRANZ 2007